To Whom It May Concern:

Taylor Fox is an exceptional educator, and it is my honor to write a letter of recommendation on her behalf. I've had the privilege to work closely with Mrs. Fox over the past several years where I've served as the school counselor at Rock Academy and, she, the Director of 7-12 Theater Arts, as well as our lead AP Humanities teacher. She is by far an outstanding teacher. One of her strengths was to create a vision for the Rock Academy within our AP Department. She did this by setting goals. She achieved these objectives by implementing a universal classroom accountability system, integrating exceptional instructional practices, and establishing a foundational framework for teaching standards within every AP course she taught at the academy. She also supported the social and emotional learning of all students in the classrooms through embedding a safe, respectful and responsible environment that augments student learning.

Throughout her time at Rock Academy, Mrs. Fox has demonstrated exceptional leadership and an impressive ability to connect with and support students across all content areas. Her approach to professional growth is both intentional and inclusive ensuring that every class she leads provides value for all students, regardless of subject or grade level. Mrs. Fox has also generously shared her gift of teaching with our 7-12 staff by supporting colleagues both new and veteran. Whether she is guiding emerging teachers as they refine their classroom management strategies or helping seasoned educators deepen their instruction practice, Taylor brings a rare balance of expertise, empathy and practical insight. Her ability to mentor with both clarity and care makes her an invaluable coach, collaborator, and leader within our school community.

Taylor's range of work extends well beyond traditional classroom instruction. She has designed and facilitated our College Prep Intensive Summer Course, a dynamic two-week intensive workshop designed to equip students with the clarity, tools and confidence they need to move forward with the college admission process. This program provides expert guidance on selecting a major, identifying the right program and university, and developing a compelling application that authentically reflects each student's strengths and aspirations. Leading these summer sessions integrated academic strategy, student support, and college readiness, reflecting Taylor's capacity to bridge instructional excellence with whole-student development. Her ability to align student growth with the broader academic and counseling goals of the school has had a lasting, positive impact on our teaching culture and student outcomes. This workshop was also an incredible asset to me in my role as Academic Dean and College and Career Counselor, enriching my ability to guide and support students with even greater expertise.

Taylor's leadership of the academy's Humanities department over the past several years speaks highly of her diligence to hard work and maintaining high standards. She aspires to lead by example as she partners with teaching staff to raise the bar on academic achievement. This philosophy helped to foster a strong Professional Learning Community as she works tirelessly to build leadership capacity in each of her colleagues. All of Taylor's techniques and strategies have been incorporated into the learning atmosphere at Rock Academy.

Mrs. Fox goes above and beyond her job expectations as an educator. She is well prepared, organized, and takes a proactive approach in her responsibilities and administrative duties. She cares deeply about her students and the staff at the academy. She's committed to furthering her professional development, and sharing any and all newfound knowledge with her colleagues. It is with great respect and pleasure that I recommend her for any teaching or administrative leadership opportunity. She would be an extraordinary asset to any position and I know she would do an outstanding job!

Sincerely,
Natalie Williamson, M.Ed.
